Dr. J keeping ABA legacy alive with sale of iconic ball

Julius Erving was the most beautiful basketball player to ever play the game.

Dr. J., as he is so affectionately known, had more moves than a surgeon. Perhaps that is why he was called “The Good Doctor.”

With high-flying dunks and acrobatic moves that defied imagination, Doc was creative, graceful and oh so silky smooth. He was an artist capable of anchoring a starting five of Van Gogh, Monet, da Vinci, Picasso and Erving.

Dr. J was so creative that Michael Jordan, the greatest player of all time, patterned his remarkable game after him.

“I would have never have had the vision if it hadn’t been for Dr. J,” Jordan once said.

Erving dominated pro basketball in the 1970s and early ’80s, winning three championships and four MVPs, including the last three in the fun, entertaining ABA. An 11-time NBA All-Star, he was the most popular star of his era and a revolutionary player, setting the tone for generations of high-flyers.

He played with a style and flare that attracted fans and hoop aficionados of all ages. He was Bird, Magic and Jordan before Bird, Magic and Jordan.

“Dr. J was a beautiful basketball player to watch,” Magic Johnson said. “He could dominate a game, and he could dominate with grace and style.”

Led by Erving’s highlight-reel performance, the ABA changed the way the game was played with its high-flying, free-wheeling style. Every spinning, twirling, scooping, jaw-dropping move by Dr. J sent kids racing for the gym or playground. Each thunderous dunk was worthy of water-cooler chatter. When The Doctor and his ABA colleagues moved to the NBA in 1976, they brought their sharp-shooting, up-tempo game with them.

Erving treasures his time in the ABA and wishes it had received more recognition for its contributions to the game. He is assisting with that effort by supporting the re-creation and sale of the league’s iconic red, white and blue ball.

The colorful ball is as synonymous with the ABA as an Erving slam dunk. A new, high-quality version has been reproduced by Lana Sports (available for $99 at www.lanasports.com) to support the Dropping Dimes Foundation for former ABA players.

Erving is thrilled to be part of the project.

“The red, white and blue ABA ball was my favorite basketball, and I’m thrilled to be part of bringing it back for another generation,” he said.

Lana Sports is the brainchild of Scott Tarter, an Indianapolis business attorney with a passion for the ABA and helping the league’s former players.

In 1970, the average player salary was about $35,000 and few players received a pension or medical benefits. Even fewer made it to the NBA, where free agency boosted salaries into six and eventually seven and eight figures.

Lana Sports helps former ABA players benefit from the game and league they helped create. Dropping Dimes was created to “bring dignity to these former players who so richly deserve it,” Tarter said.

“They not only helped change the game on the court, they represented something bigger,” he said. “They were part of a rebel league that challenged authority and flourished during an era marked by civil rights, gender equality and other social change. They’re part of a genuine brotherhood that, while older and fewer in number, is as strong today as it ever was.”

Along with fellow Hall of Famers and ABA/NBA greats Rick Barry, George “The Iceman” Gervin, Spencer Haywood, George McGinnis, Charlie Scott, Bobby Jones and others, Erving is doing his part to keep the league’s legacy alive.

“I love the passion Lana Sports brings when it comes to protecting the ABA’s legacy, and how this new ball will benefit my former ABA brothers,” he said.

Dr. J’s game and style was always beautiful, graceful and admirable, just like his latest move to help his former league and brothers.

PAT VENDITTE

JUST FOR FUN, EAT YOUR NEXT BOWL OF SOUP WITH YOUR SPOON IN YOUR NON-DOMINANT HAND. AFTER YOU'VE SLOPPED HALF OF IT ON YOUR SHIRT, STOP AND THINK FOR A MOMENT HOW HARD IT WOULD BE TO PITCH A BASEBALL WITH YOUR NON-DOMINANT HAND. THEN THINK OF HOW HARD IT WOULD BE TO DO IT ON A MAJOR LEAGUE LEVEL. IN FACT, THIS IS SO RARE AN ABILITY

THAT THERE HAS ONLY BEEN ONE PLAYER IN THE MODERN ERA TO DO IT ON A REGULAR BASIS -- RIGHTY/LEFTY RELIEVER PAT VENDITTE. PAT BEGAN DOING THIS AT A VERY YOUNG AGE. SOME LITTLE LEAGUE COACHES WERE SO CONFUSED BY THIS THAT THEY THOUGHT PAT HAD A TWIN BROTHER ON THE TEAM. PITCHING WITH A CUSTOM-MADE SIX-FINGER GLOVE THAT CAN BE WORN ON EITHER HAND, PAT HAD SUCCESS THROUGH COLLEGE AND THE MINORS, EVENTUALLY HITTING THE MAJORS WITH THE OAKLAND A's ON JUNE 5, 2015. HE POSTED HIS BEST STATISTICAL SEASON WITH THE DODGERS IN 2018 WHEN HE PITCHED TO A 2.57 ERA IN 15 GAMES OUT OF THE PEN.

"MY DAD THOUGHT OUTSIDE THE BOX WHEN HE TAUGHT ME TO BE A SWITCH-PITCHER," SAYS PAT. "I'M GRATEFUL FOR THAT BECAUSE, WHEN YOU LOOK AT MY VELOCITY, I PROBABLY WOULDN'T BE HERE WITHOUT THAT SWITCH-PITCHING ADVANTAGE."

"AMPHIBIOUS PITCHER MAKES HIS DEBUT," READ THE NEWSPAPER HEADLINE IN THE EAST OREGONIAN AFTER PAT MADE HIS FIRST BIG LEAGUE APPEARANCE. THEY, OF COURSE, MEANT "AMBIDEXTROUS," BUT THE MALAPROP AMUSED OLDER READERS WHO RECALLED THAT YOGI BERRA USED TO DESCRIBE PESKY SWITCH-HITTERS AS "AMPHIBIOUS!"

FANATICS CHAIRMAN OUTLINES VISION FOR FUTURE NEW COMPANY TO SELL CARDS DIRECTLY TO COLLECTORS

Fanatics Chairman Michael Rubin with NFL Hall of Famer Peyton Manning.

Fanatics plans to sell trading cards directly to consumers, cutting out distributors and middle men and creating a one-stop-shop for collectors.

Fanatics has acquired the licenses to manufacture baseball, basketball and football trading cards beginning in the next few years. Its deal with the Major Baseball Players Association goes into effect in 2023, while deals with MLB, NBA and the NBA and NFL players unions begin in 2026.

The deals mean the company's new Fanatics Trading Cards division will replace Topps and Panini as the officially licensed manufacturer of baseball, basketball and football cards, possibly ending an era of sports cards. Fanatics Chairman Michael Rubin indicated, however, that "it's absolutely possible" that Fanatics may try to buy one of the current card manufacturers.

Rubin appeared on CNBC recently and outlined his vision for the new company.

"This is really about a completely different vision for where the trading card industry should go," said Rubin, who characterized the current collector experience as "pretty brutal."

"You've got to buy primary cards with so many people kind of in the middle of it that you buy primary cards and you sell secondary cards somewhere else," he said. "You get your cards graded by another party, you need to store them with someone else. ... This is about our vision to create an incredible collector's experience, bringing all the pieces together."

Rubin said the Fanatics Trading Cards company will be similar to its sports apparel and merchandise business, which sells directly to consumers.

"To be quite frank, the trading card companies are good manufacturers but they don't have the vision for building a much more direct-to-consumer model and then bringing all the pieces together to create a great collector's experience," he said. "It's really what we did in the merchandise category where Fanatics covers that business, but now doing it in trading cards."

According to the Wall Street Journal, Fanatics has attracted $350 million in Series A funding, boosting its valuation of the new company to $10.4 billion.

"With Fanatics owning the rights, they are fundamentally going to change the experience for the fan and collector in a way that the existing rights holders just haven't done," Greg Mondre, co-CEO of investor Silver Lake, told the WSJ. "Hopefully, we're going to expand the audience of people that access these cards, that trade these cards and want to collect these cards."

Topps, which has held the MLB license for more than a decade and has manufactured baseball cards since the 1950s, was valued at more than $1 billion when it was on the verge of going public before news of the Fanatics MLB deal emerged. Rubin said the current card manufacturers — Topps, Panini and Upper Deck — will make close to $1 billion combined this year on trading cards.

"That's all selling to distributors, who then sell to retailers, who then try to resell it, who then put them on eBay, who then sell them to collectors," he said. "When you think about taking this model much more direct to consumer, and then adding in an integrated collectors experience of having the primary cards sold, secondary capabilities, with grading and breaking and insurance and storage and financing, this is a very massive opportunity."

Fanatics has reportedly given the MLB, NBA and the three players associations an equity stake in the new company. WSJ reported that the leagues and players will own 14 percent of the company.

Rubin said the leagues and players are invested in the company's plan for the future.

"Each property made a decision independently that they wanted to give a much better experience to their collectors long term and to really grow the hobby," Rubin said. "They thought the vision that we had made so much more sense and also leveraging the 80 million-plus fans that we have in our database that built the structural advantages that we have when we created this digital sports platform."

Rubin also said the company plans to cater to the younger generation of collectors who approach the hobby as an investment or alternative asset.

"That's the most important part," he said. "This is really a financial asset of the younger generation and I believe that with a great collector experience we can grow this business many times. I think there's great growth ahead for the hobby."

PWCC LAUNCHES NEW MONTHLY AUCTION

FAST-PACED EXTENDED BIDDING CREATES FUN, EXCITING EVENT

PWCC Marketplace takes pride in doing things differently and breaking new ground in the sports card industry.

The largest trading card seller on eBay for the past decade, it was the first to create a vault for collectors to store their most valuable cards. It has brokered record sales for some of the highest-selling cards in the industry.

Now it has designed a new, fast-paced way to conduct monthly auctions.

“It’s different, just like everything we do at PWCC,” said Jesse Craig, PWCC’s director of business development. “We don’t necessarily follow the industry norms, and I think it’s had a lot of success.”

PWCC launched a new Monthly Auction on Oct. 7. It features more than 40,000 cards, its largest auction to date, and offers new extended bidding features designed to generate excitement, competition and keep collectors engaged throughout the event.

The first Monthly Auction will close on six consecutive nights beginning on Oct. 24. Each night will feature a sport-specific auction, starting with baseball, basketball, football, hockey, soccer, miscellaneous sports and TCG (Pokémon and Magic the Gathering cards). On Oct. 29, the night after the final closing, the Monthly Auction will feature a “Round 2” to auction any duplicate cards. The second round will take place each month on the day after the closing of the first round.

The new extended bidding model allows clients to participate in a fast-paced, competitive experience that is significantly shorter than traditional auctions. Extended bidding period will begin at 7 p.m. PST with a 60-second countdown. Any item that receives two more bids will move to extended bidding. An item that is still active after 7:30 p.m. will close if it does not receive a bid within a five-minute period. A single-day auction will be considered fully closed once extended bidding expires with no bid placed.

“It’s going to be fast-paced and it’s going to be fun,” Craig said.

The new software and extended bidding model, which has a patent pending, has been a success in PWCC’s Premier Auctions.

“There has been a lot of buzz in the industry about how we close it,” Craig said. “It’s a little bit more fast-paced and it’s just got a lot of excitement the way the software works. It’s a lot of action and a lot of fun.”

The new process allows PWCC to conduct sport-specific auctions in one night instead of over a four- or five-day period.

“Now we can close all of baseball in one night,” he said. “We can create one event around baseball for all the baseball collectors and investors can be in the room in one night and pay attention to anywhere from a few thousand to 10,000 specific cards closing in one night.”

The Monthly Auction is the next step in PWCC’s move to reorganize its business on its own platforms after being banned from eBay in August for shill bidding, allegations it has staunchly denied.

Its Premier Auction for high-end cards did $12.6 million in sales in August and $10.8 in September. It also launched its own Fixed Price Marketplace, offering more than 63,000 cards from its PWCC Vault. It did more than $3 million in sales in the first few weeks, which Craig calls “a huge success.”

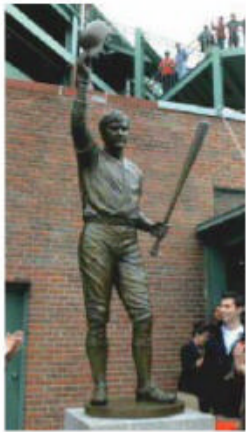

The split from eBay allowed the company to create its own platforms and gain better control over its business.

“Now we control everything. We control how the software looks, we control buyer vetting, we control the full gamut, and we didn’t have that ability before,” Craig said. “Now we have full control and that’s huge for us.”

PWCC has contracted two third-party security firms to prevent shill bidding and ensure its auctions are above board. Tech Heads, a 25-year-old cyber security firm, will validate and maintain a firewall to prevent anyone from seeing maximum bids. Triaxiom Security will audit the Tech Head firewall, validate the confidentiality of max bids and ensure accurate bid recording. Triaxiom will release an audit report on each monthly auction, which Craig said will be published on the company’s website.

PWCC also has a Marketplace Trust Team that will monitor the auction, using proprietary software that alerts them to bidding abnormalities and vets bidders to make sure they follow through with payment. If a buyer is caught shill bidding or does not follow through with payment, they will be banned from PWCC Marketplace.

PWCC also is not allowing company employees or contractors to bid on items in the auction.

NFL CARDS ENJOYING A BRADY BOOM

SERENA WILLIAMS ROOKIE CARD GOES FOR $25K

In all the years he played in New England, Tom Brady never had the full and deep range of weapons he's enjoying in Tampa. As such, he's having an other-worldly season.

Never mind that he's 44. Brady is defying all logic in terms of the human body's durability, playing at a level not far from his peak years — which in scientific corners would have been 15 or so seasons ago. ("Peak years" theories typically hold that athletes reach their highest level of play in their mid- to late-20s.)

In the first five games of the NFL season, Brady threw for 15 TDs (vs. only two interceptions), putting him on a pace for more than 50 TDs. He did throw exactly 50 touchdown passes one season — way back in 2007, when he was a mere lad of 30. By now, he's about to surpass 600 career TD passes and 81,000 yards.

In the process, Brady has become one of the most revered figures ever among collectors. You know full well about his most popular cards — his 2000 Playoff Contenders Rookie Ticket and 2000 Upper Deck SP Authentic. But what about Brady cards beyond those?

Here's a list of five different Brady cards that are bubbling under, per these recent eBay sales:

- $22,323 on 46 bids: 2012 Panini Prizm Silver Rainbow (PSA 10): Notable

Top Ten Online Auctions

1. $123,100 on 66 bids: 2003-04 Topps Chrome LeBron James Refractor (BGS 10)
2. $83,101 on 169 bids: 1952 Topps Mickey Mantle (PSA 5)
3. $77,850 on 134 bids: Upper Deck All-Time Greats 9 Autographs (Jordan, James, Bird, Johnson, Russell, Erving, West, Olajuwon, Robinson) #1/1, nine autos (BGS 8.5)
4. $55,100 on 57 bids: 2004-05 Panini Megacracks (soccer) Lionel Messi (BGS 9.5)
5. $42,100 on 56 bids: 2020-21 Panini National Treasures LaMelo Ball, #16/99, auto patch (PSA 9)
6. $40,700 on 73 bids: 2020-21 Panini National Treasures LaMelo Ball Gold, #4/24, auto patch (PSA 9)
7. $36,367 on 93 bids: 2001 Upper Deck SP Authentic Tiger Woods Gold, #92/100, auto (PSA 9)
8. $34,999 on 1 bid: 2000 Playoff Contenders sealed box
9. $30,500 on 60 bids: 2003-04 Topps Chrome LeBron James Refractor (PSA 9)
10. $30,199 on 34 bids: 2020-21 Panini National Treasures LaMelo Ball, #87/99, auto patch (ungraded)

because it was Brady's first Prizm card.

- $21,469 on 46 bids: 2000 Bowman Chrome (PSA 10). Not nearly as pricey as his rookie-year Contenders and SP Authentic cards but gaining steam. (Along with this example, another one graded PSA 10 brought $20,201 on 70 bids. Going deeper, five others graded PSA 10 sold for prices between $15,750 and $17,000.)

- $20,966 on 65 bids: 2020 Panini Prizm Snakeskin (PSA 10). One of Brady's first cards as a Buccaneer. Features a border replicating the look and feel of a snake's skin.

- $19,999 on 1 bid: 2020 Panini Flawless Finishes, #1/10, autographed (ungraded). Celebrates the Patriots' Super Bowl XXXVIII win over Carolina in February 2004.

- $16,100 on 46 bids: 2020 Panini Flawless Gold Dual Jersey, #2/10, autographed (ungraded). Besides Brady's signature, this card holds two Patriots uniform patches — one blue and one white.

MAX TO THE MAX

One of these years, Max Scherzer, now 37, is going to retire. But it may not be anytime soon, if you go by his 2021 performance.

In 2021, he evoked later-stage Nolan Ryan, posting a record of 15-4, an ERA of 2.46 and a WHIP of 0.86. He also struck out 236 in 179 innings. Yet he's hiding in the shadows in the hobby — a superstar who hasn't drawn masses of collectors. His debut on cardboard was 2008; the Scherzer rookie drawing at least some attention is the Update Refractor of his Topps Chrome card.

In recent weeks, we've seen it sell for prices of $1,025 on 31 bids (ungraded) and $1,000 on one bid (BGS 9).

Then there's the no-frills (non-Refractor) base card of Scherzer's 2008 Topps Chrome card. One Gem-Mint PSA

ONLINE AUCTIONEER III

10 example of Scherzer's Chrome rookie brought $818 on 57 bids in September. Three others graded PSA 10 fetched similar prices: $800 on 40 bids, $799 on 39 bids and $796 on eight bids.

That card may have a consistent sales pattern now, but if Scherzer keeps on baffling opposing hitters next season, it'll no doubt start pushing four figures.

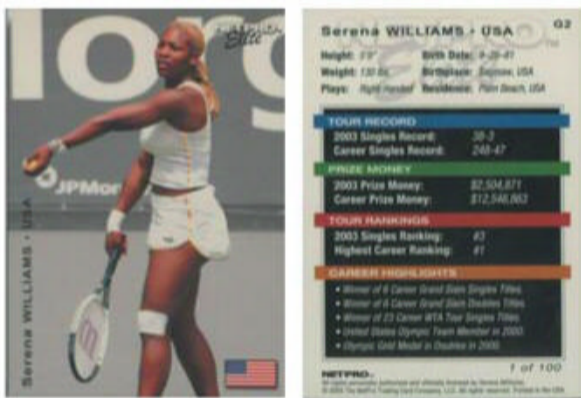

Other Scherzer gems that have sold in recent eBay auctions:

- A 2009 Upper Deck Masterpieces autographed Stroke of Genius card graded PSA 10 sold for $823 on 34 bids.

- A 2008 Upper Deck Ultimate Gold Jersey signed card (marked #18 of 25) brought $732 on 28 bids. It was graded BGS 9.

- A signed 2008 Bowman Chrome Blue Refractor (#79/99) fetched $616 on 29 bids.

- A 2019 Topps Dynasty signed 1-of-1 Gold card bearing a game-used Scherzer jersey patch sold for $610 on 32 bids. The reverse celebrates a special Scherzer accomplishment from May 11, 2016—he tied an MLB record by striking out 20 batters in a game.

ON THE OUTSIDE LOOKING IN

How about this? For the first time in ages (we'll need to review 20 years of entries!), we have a woman featured in this space: Serena Williams. A 2003 Netpro Elite rookie card of the tennis superstar sold for $25,101 in a September eBay auction listed by Probstein123.

Williams, who recently turned 40 (Sept. 26, 2021), has long held major appeal to tennis fans and beyond. She has won 23 Grand Slam singles title, a record by any player in what's known as the Open Era (which began in 1968, when Grand Slam tournaments allowed pros to compete with amateurs). The only woman with more Grand Slam singles titles: Margaret Court.

For one amazing stretch of 186 consecutive weeks, Williams was the No. 1-ranked singles player in the world, per the Women's Tennis Association (WTA). Among active players, she has 39 Grand Slam titles combined in singles, doubles and mixed doubles.

So it's no surprise, really, to see collectors clamoring for her rookie card. The Netpro Elite listed below at $25,101 was buoyed by its PSA 10 grade. A PSA 9 example of the same card sold in August for $7,408 on 18 bids. Another graded PSA 6 drew $1,669.

Here's our full list of the 10 highest-selling items outside our Top 10:

- $30,100 on 57 bids: 2003-04 Topps Chrome LeBron James Refractor (PSA 9)

- $30,100 on 74 bids: 2018-19 Panini Donruss Rated Rookie Optic Luka Doncic Green Prizm, #1/5, auto (PSA 9)

- $28,400 on 60 bids: 2018 Topps Chrome Update Juan Soto Gold Refractor, #1/50, auto (PSA 10)

- $27,656 on 36 bids: 2020 Panini National Treasures Justin Herbert Silver, #1/25, auto patch (BGS 8.5, auto 10)

- $26,600 on 56 bids: 2000 Upper Deck SP Authentic Tom Brady, #899/1250 (PSA 9)

- $26,200 on 28 bids: 2015-16 Panini Flawless (soccer) Cristiano Ronaldo, #15/15, auto patch (BGS 9.5)

- $25,101 on 32 bids: 2003 Netpro Elite (tennis) Serena Williams, 1 of 100 (PSA 10)

- $24,100 on 56 bids: 2006-07 Topps Finest Kevin Durant Blue Refractor, #53/299 (BGS 10)

- $23,100 on 54 bids: 2020 Panini Contenders Optic Joe Burrow Rookie Ticket Gold, #10/10 (BGS 9.5, auto 10)

- $22,600 on 68 bids: 2020-21 Panini National Treasures LaMelo Ball, #90/99, auto patch (ungraded)

REMEMBERING KOBE

Here's an extremely cool and very moving item related to Kobe Bryant: a multiple-autographed booklet of L.A. Lakers game tickets from 2015-16, his final season as a pro. An eBay seller offered the item in a September auction.

Some 76 bids later, the price had soared to $22,100.

Bryant signed the booklet five times: once on the cover and then individually on four different tickets inside. The booklet cover was printed with two photos of the beloved Hall of Famer—once as a rookie and once toward the end of his career. Bryant's photo also appears on the tickets inside.

DON'T FORGET ME!

Ronald Acuna Jr. may have missed half of this season's games, thanks to the torn anterior cruciate ligament he suffered in his right knee in July. But collectors are counting on a healthy return in 2022 for the Atlanta Braves. That's the only way to explain the $35,100 winning bid in an eBay auction in early September (from our previous Top 10 period) for a BGS 9.5-graded specimen of Acuna's 2017 autographed Bowman Chrome Gold Refractor patch card. It touched off a bit of a bidding war, too. A flurry of activity—80 bids in all—led up to the hefty sales price.

Acuna was having the type of season we've come to expect from the outfielder, batting .283 with 24 homers and 17 steals through July 10. At age 23, Acuna already has 105 career homers and 78 stolen bases over what amounts to about two and half seasons (he hasn't yet played 400 games). Pro-rate those stats out over 12 or so healthy seasons. They tell us Acuna is on a path to 600 HRs and 400 SBs.

ANOTHER ELWAY COMEBACK

NFL great John Elway talks autographs, baseball cards and his favorite quarterback

John Elway celebrates the Denver Broncos' victory in Super Bowl XXXIII in 1999, the last game of his illustrious career.

John Elway burst onto the sports scene as a dynamic field general for Stanford University in 1979. The uber-talented, multi-sport athlete starred on the gridiron and on the baseball diamond for the Cardinal.

The strong-armed outfielder was drafted in the second round of the 1981 draft by the New York Yankees. He even spent some time in the minor leagues playing short-season ball for the Oneonta Yankees. He showed such promise that Yankees owner George Steinbrenner planned to add him to the big league squad by 1985.

The Yankee pinstripes were not meant to be, however, as Elway fulfilled his destiny and became one of the greatest quarterbacks in NFL history. Elway spent his entire 16-year NFL career playing for the Denver Broncos and at the time of his retirement was the winningest quarterback and second-most prolific passer in NFL history. He is a two-time Super Bowl Champion, a Super Bowl MVP and the 1987 NFL MVP.

The king of the fourth-quarter comeback, Elway was a winner, plain and simple. After suffering three heartbreaking Super Bowl losses, he ended his career on a high note, capturing back-to-back Lombardi trophies by winning Super Bowls XXII and XXXIII, endearing him to fans and solidifying his legacy even further.

Elway was enshrined into the College Football Hall of Fame in 2000 and the Pro Football Hall of Fame in Canton in 2004.

In this exclusive interview with SCD contributor Tony Reid, Elway talks about his admiration for fellow all-time great quarterback Roger Staubach, pride in his signature and his collection of game-used items from his storied career.

As a multi-sport athlete, you have signed your name countless times for fans over the years. When was the very first time you were asked for your autograph?

If I had a dollar for every autograph I've ever signed ... well, let's just say that I could probably retire. In all seriousness, for a long time in the early part of my career, I never understood the fascination with autographs. I was always uncomfortable with it because I would rather have talked to a person who I looked up to than have a piece of paper with their name. But over time, I understood it more. The first time someone asked me was in high school. I think it was after an article came out about me in a magazine.

What is your most memorable fan interaction over the course of your playing days?

Oh, gosh. There are so many. When pregnant women ask me to sign their bellies, that's always a little uncomfortable. People have tattoos of me on their body and people have me sign parts of their body and then say they won't ever bathe again. That's always a little disturbing. I feel badly for their friends and family.

As a Hall of Famer and one of the all-time greats, your autograph is in high demand. How much fan mail and how many requests do you receive now?

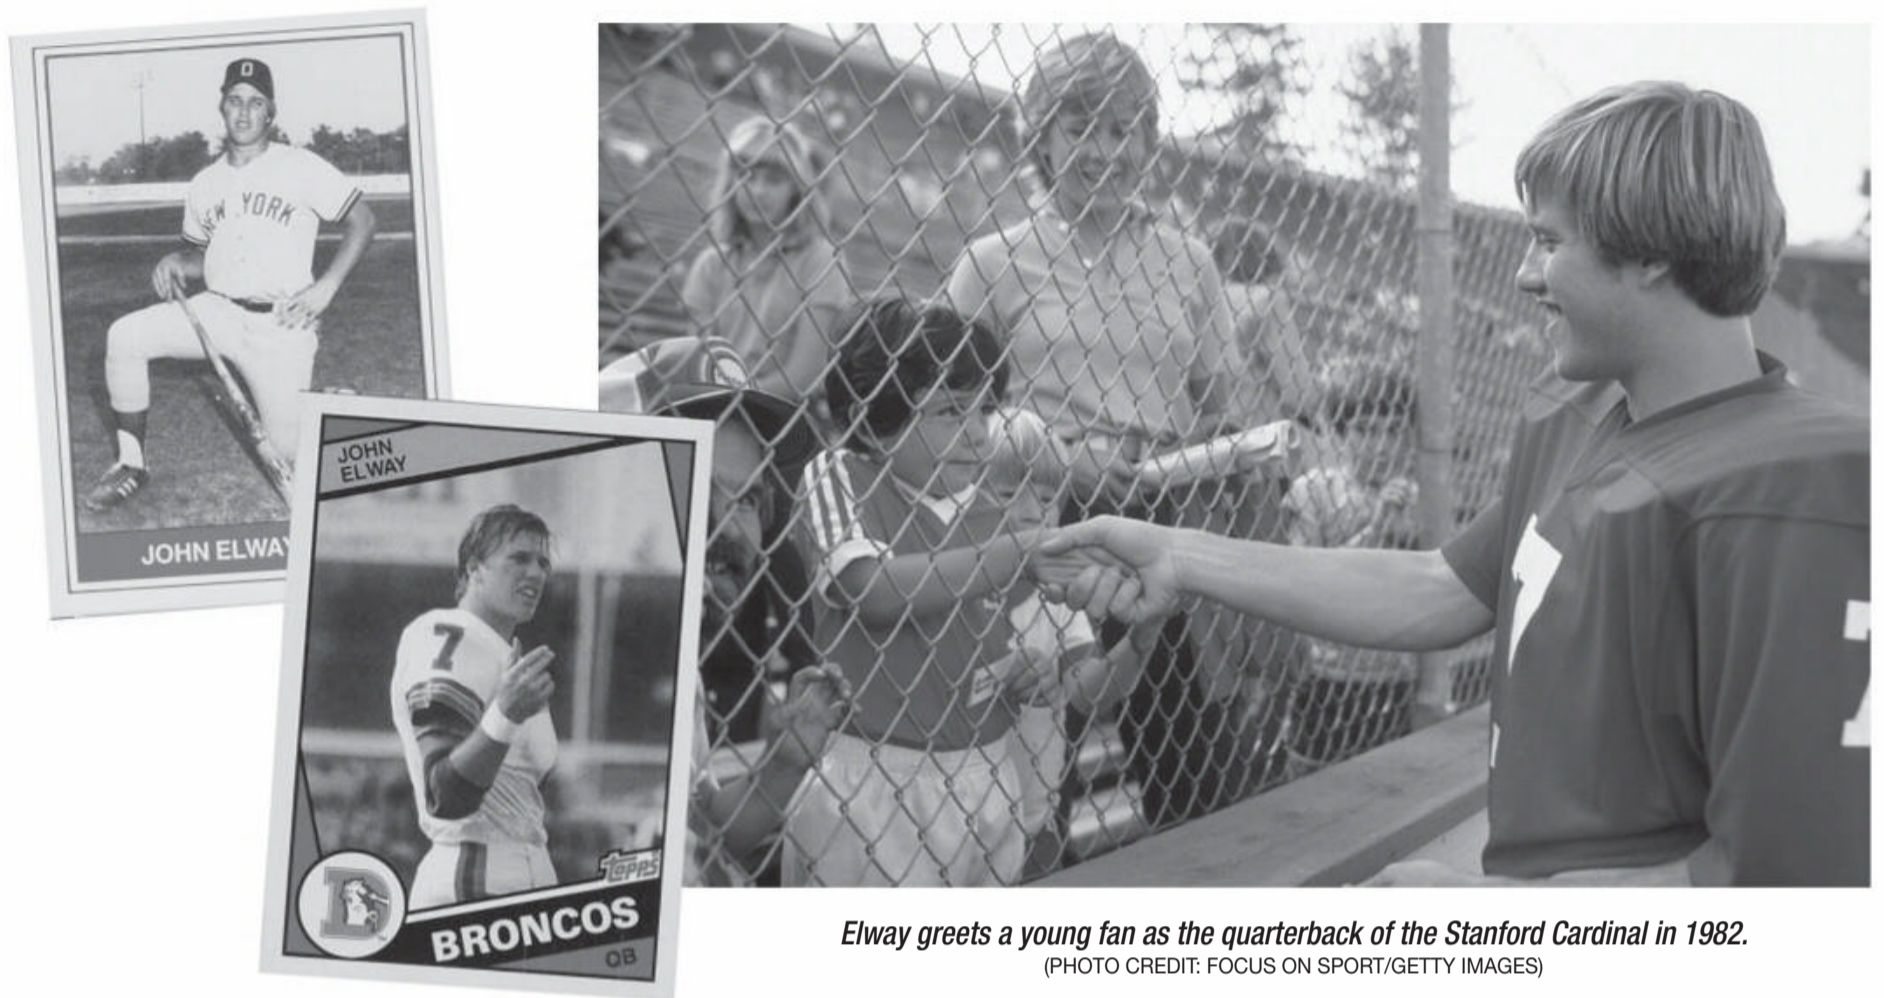

My longtime assistant, Kathy Hatch, is probably the best person to answer that question. I just know that we still have plenty of requests to deal with every week.

Elway greets a young fan as the quarterback of the Stanford Cardinal in 1982.

do you take in your signature?

Thank you. I've been told that I have a good signature. I can always tell when I've been signing too many for too long, because my signature doesn't look good to me either. That's when I know it's time to stop. So, I do take pride in it.

As a young athlete, what players inspired you?

Roger Staubach of the Dallas Cowboys is who I always wanted to be when I was in the backyard or playing ball with my buddies. I loved that he could run and was in the Navy, too. He was always a gentleman.

Who inspired you further once you became a pro and great in your own right?

Actually, probably still Roger. He was so successful in business and always carried himself with such professionalism and dignity. I really liked that.

Your iconic rookie card appeared in the classic 1984 Topps set. How special was it the first time you saw yourself on a trading card? How great was it to see yourself on a baseball card (1982 Oneonta Yankees) for the first time, too?

I think the Yankee card was the most memorable because I grew up with baseball cards. Football cards weren't as prevalent to me. So, to see myself in my Stanford uniform with a Yankee reference was pretty cool at that time.

Did you hold on to cards of yourself over the years? Do you have a favorite card or piece of memorabilia that was produced of you during your career?

Yes, the card companies were always good about sending me my cards, and some entire collections. So, I do have a lot in my storage unit. My favorite piece would have to be my Super Bowl jerseys and rings and my Hall of Fame ring and jacket.

Did you collect sports cards as a kid? If so, who or what did you collect?

I really didn't. I was just too busy playing games myself and going to my dad's games. Besides, I never had any extra money.

As a Pro Football Hall of Famer, two-time Super Bowl champion, a Super Bowl MVP and 1987 NFL MVP, do you have a room or area where you have memorabilia and awards displayed?

I do have an office in my home that has all of my game balls displayed. There's another area in my home that has some of the latter accomplishments.

Is there an item from your career that you don't have that you wished you had held onto?

Not really. I don't get too nostalgic about stuff. I just wish I had a better memory to recall some of the events. But, maybe my old glove, or the bat from my first hit as a Yankee.

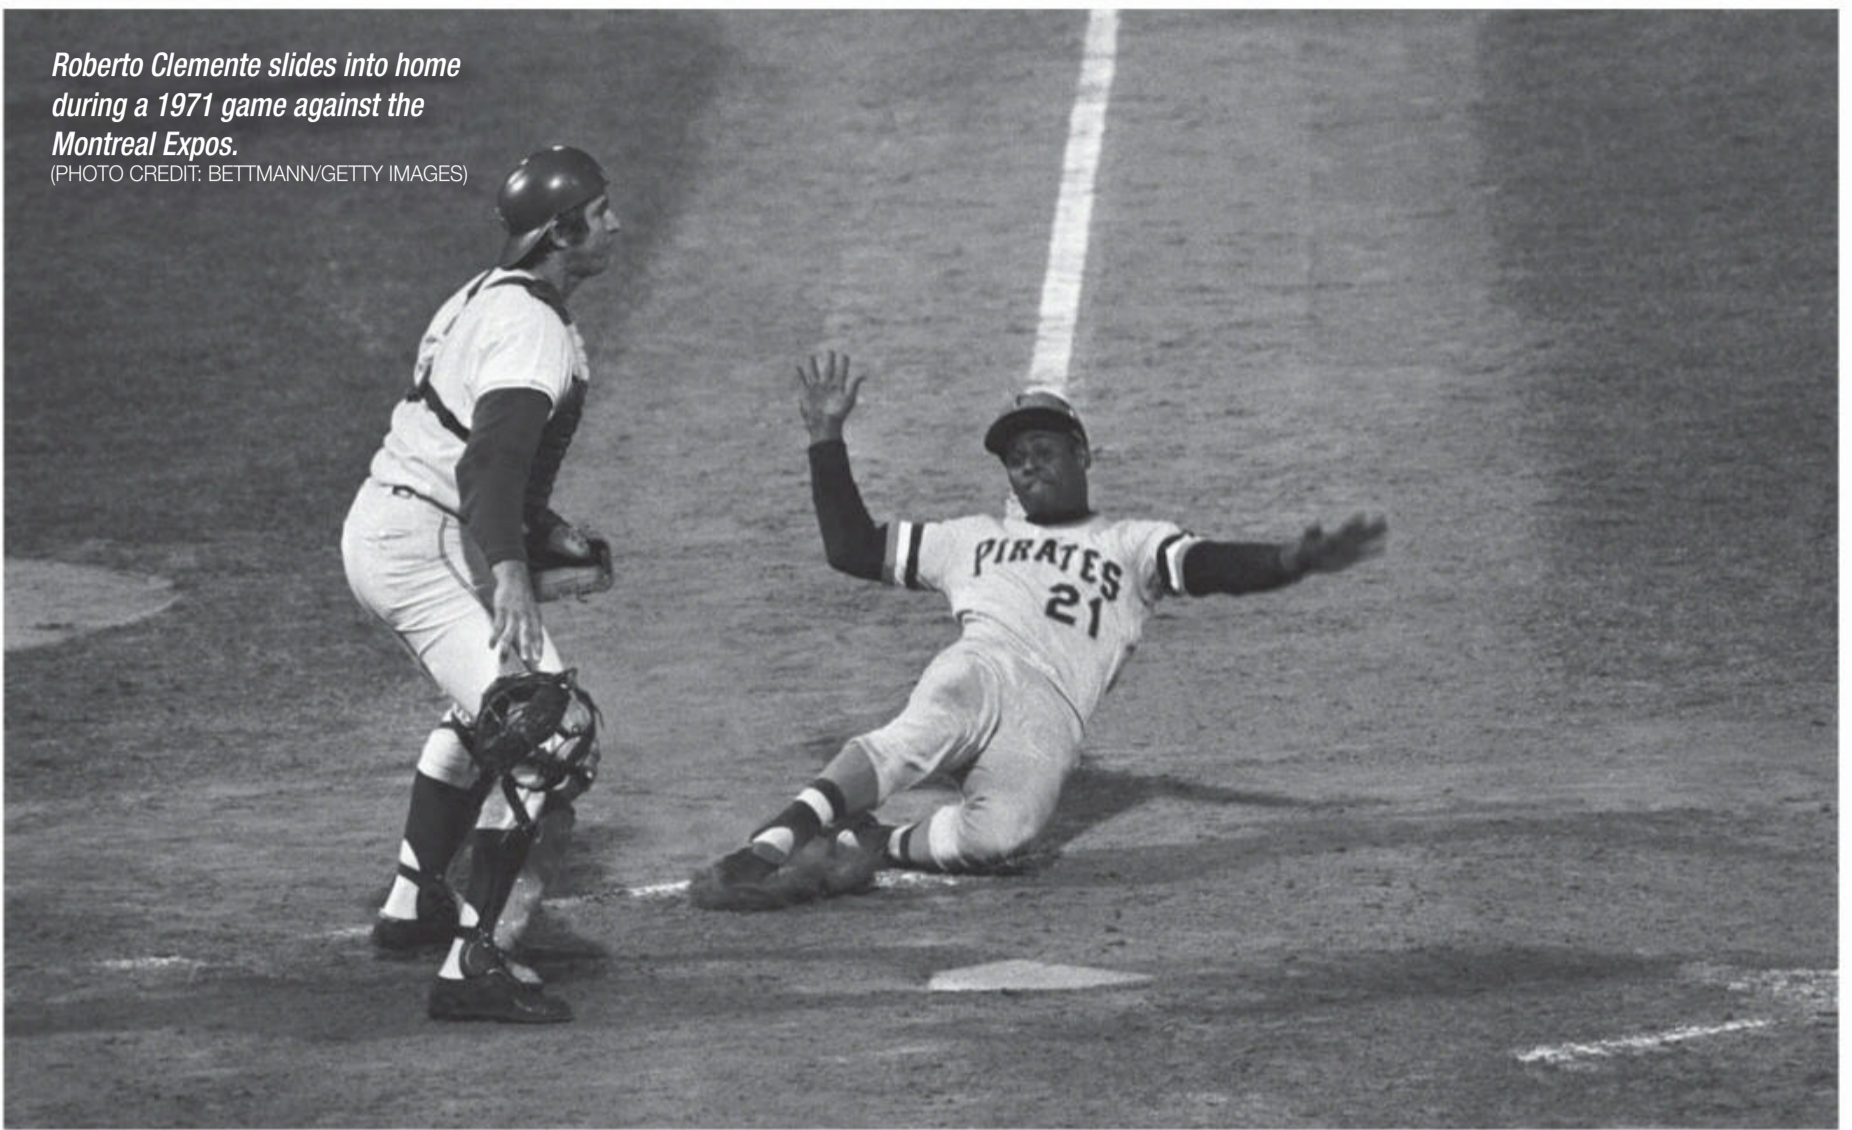

Jersey swapping is a big tradition in professional sports now. If you could go back in time and swap jerseys with one player, who would it be and why?

Well, of course there would be Roger Staubach and some of the all-time great quarterbacks, like Otto Graham and Johnny Unitas would be on the list, too.

GREAT IN MORE WAYS THAN ONE

Roberto Clemente was a star and sports legend on and off the field. A look at his most colorful and unique collectibles.

BY DOUG KOZTOSKI

When the first night game in MLB history took place in May 1935 at Cincinnati's Crosley Field, nine-month-old Roberto Clemente enjoyed the focus of his large family.

Thirty-six years later, in the inaugural night game in World Series history, Clemente shined under the artificial illumination, stroking three hits as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Baltimore Orioles in Game 4 on Oct. 13, 1971.

The Bucs stopped the O's in seven games in that Fall Classic and Clemente, along with his stellar defensive play, registered a hit in each game — the same hitting milestone he reached in 1960 as Pittsburgh beat the New York Yankees in that historic series — to win World Series MVP. Clemente, in a sense, lived under multiple spotlights when you combine his baseball exploits and his off-the-field humanitarian efforts and eventually reached icon status as he consistently delivered something a bit different.

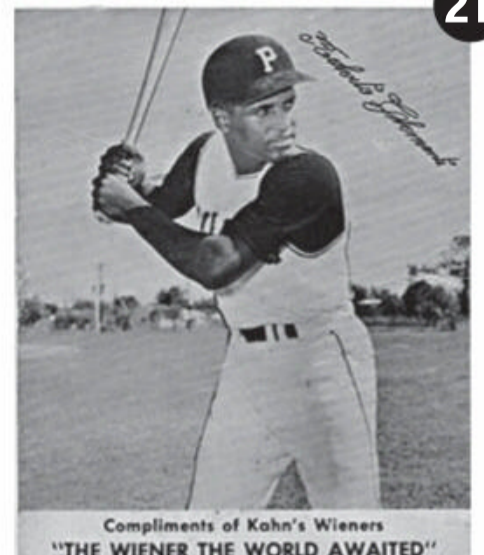

In commemoration of the 50-year anniversary of the first World Series game under the lights and to celebrate Clemente in general, we take a look at Clemente collectibles.

As a nod to his primary Pittsburgh jersey number 21, we take a look at 21 somewhat oddball items of “The Great One.”

This compilation, created with input from seasoned Clemente collectors Howard Chasser, Chris Mandell and Steve Radcliffe, emphasizes a blend of regional and at least relative mainstream examples. None are his regular main “base” card from the average Topps set, even though those are tremendously popular.

21. 1958 KAHN'S WEINERS

This rare regional card comes up on each of the want lists from our Clemente collectors. “It’s the only Kahn’s Clemente I don’t have in my collection,” Mandell said. The outfielder appeared in this hot dog-related set in 1957-64 and 1966.

20. 1959 TOPPS #543 "CORSAIR OUTFIELD TRIO"

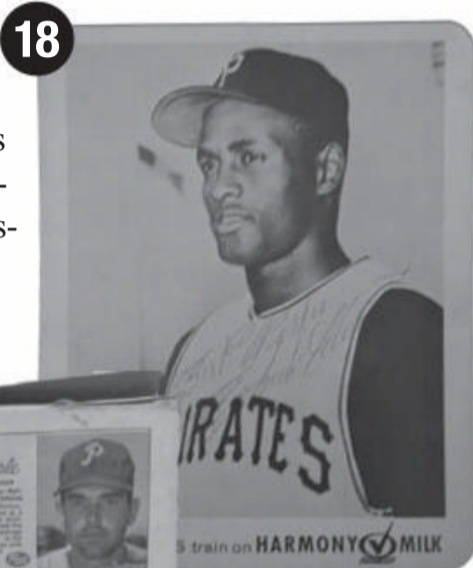

The first glimpse of the outfielder on a Topps card outside of his regular pasteboard or a team card.

19. 1960 BAZOOKA GUM BOX (WITH YOGI BERRA AND KEN BOYER)

Chasser diligently hunted this box for decades. "Last year I found a guy on eBay who owned a complete set [of the Bazooka boxes]," he said. "I pinched myself almost daily for two weeks as I stared at the end of the 30-year search."

18. 1961 HARMONY MILK

The year for these 8x10 photos with round corners is approximate for some collectors. Radcliffe called this possibly "the toughest regional [Clemente] I know of."

17. 1961 POST CEREAL #132

Issued mainly on the back of cereal boxes, collectors could also wrangle these Post cards via a mail-in offer for the 10-card team sheets. The team sheets are difficult to find and pricey, although some reprints do exist.

16. 1962 TOPPS BASEBALL BUCKS #17

An early Clemente Topps oddball item. Distributed in their own one-cent packs, these come with a fold/crease and look like smaller pieces of currency.

15. 1962 PITTSBURGH EXHIBITS 5 OF SPADES

"The story I heard out of Pittsburgh is these were made in somebody's basement," Radcliffe said. "They were never licensed, but they were sold out of vending machines. The authorities put an end to the operation."

14. 1963 SALADA COIN

The second of two years of Salada coins, these are metal, not like the plastic ones with the paper inserts from 1962, and deliver vibrant colors.

13. 1964 TOPPS STAND-UPS

“The yellow and green jump right out, it has a comic book punch,” Mandell said. “It’s meant to be folded half-way down, it’s a toy as much as a card.”

12. 1964 KDKA TV/RADIO/ SWEET CLEAN PORTRAITS

“An incredibly difficult oversized item issued by Sweet Clean laundromats in Pittsburgh,” Chasser said. “Few collectors have ever seen these.”

11

11. 1966 TOPPS #215 1965 NL BATTING LEADERS

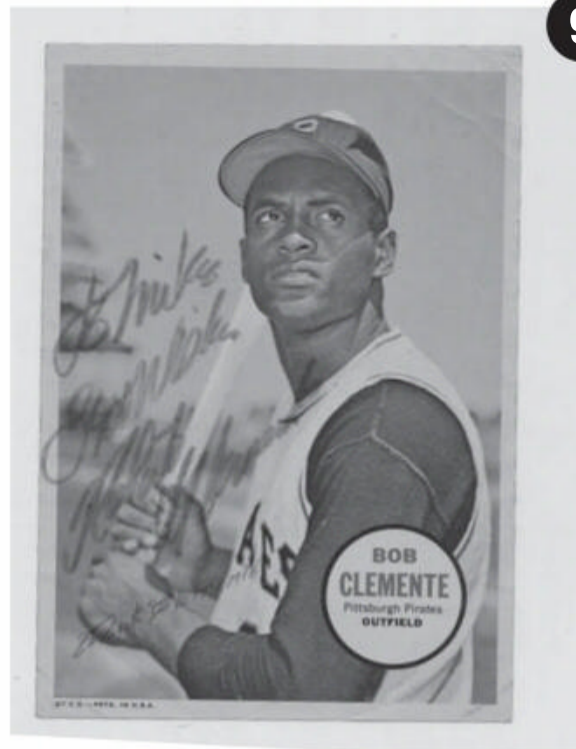

Pictured with Hank Aaron and Willie Mays, this is likely the key league leader card from a Golden Age of cards, based on the player for player star power.

10. 1967 COKE BOTTLE CAPS

“These came on bottles of Coke, Fresca, Sprite and Fanta,” Radcliffe noted. Finding these without rust and/or a few dings is a challenge.

9. 1967 TOPPS PIN-UP STICKER

“This is believed to be a Topps prototype [to date it is unique] and it has the same image and similar sizing to the 1967 pin-up inserts, but has no number,” Chasser said. “And it is printed on sticker stock like the 1967 Pirates stickers and 1968 Action All-Star stickers.” Plus, Chasser likes this item since it was found for him “by a friend, who has since passed, who shared a mutual admiration for Clemente.”

8. 1967 TOPPS STICKERS

This test issue featured players from the Boston Red Sox and Pirates. Clemente shows up twice and one touts him “for MAYOR.”

7. 1967 TOPPS VENEZUELAN

The identical image as the key regular Topps Clemente card from the same year. Mandell hopes to see one of these in person at some point. “The typical Venezuelan patina makes it look even better!”

6. 1968 TOPPS 3-D

“The key Clemente card,” according to Mandell. “It’s fairly rare. It was a test issue, a new idea.”

5. 1969 MILTON BRADLEY #60

Part of a board game, the superstar normally rules the 296-card set.

4. 1971 MILK DUDS

Fairly plentiful in either hand cut or box form, a good shot of Clemente on the candy box back.

3. 1971 KELLOGG'S 3-D #5

In only the second year of these cards showing up in certain cereal boxes, Kellogg's decided to issue these one at a time instead of in a mail-in offer as all their other comparable sets of the era. Clemente appeared in the 1970-72 Kellogg's issues. "Want a tougher challenge?" asks Chasser. "Try to get them in unopened pack form!"

2. 1972 7-ELEVEN SLURPEE CUP

The first time the convenience store chain served up the semi-frozen drink in a plastic cup set with a major sports league theme. At this point, it's hard to find in strong condition.

1. 1972 TOPPS #226

This cardboard shows Clemente on the base paths during

Game 4 of the 1971 World Series, thus ending the list largely where the topic began, with "The Great One" being there for his teammates and the masses during the first Fall Classic night game. For collectors, this card is an easy snag with some flair, much like the ballplayer demonstrated on a regular basis.

Of course, many other cards, inserts and additional oddball memorabilia pieces could have been on this list, but this "21" has a little something for several collectors within the hobby. And like Clemente in each of his 14 World Series games, some of the hits here were small and others big, but all spark solid interest.

TAKING THE EXTRA BASE

Mandell says interest in Clemente items is "sky-rocketing."

"It seems to build over the years and I think Clemente interest and value will continue to go upward," he said.

But more than that, Mandell, Chasser and Radcliffe emphasize the superstar's athletic ability, combined with the struggles he endured, plus his humanitarian efforts, that serve as inspiration for many.

"Dying tragically, but while trying to help others," Mandell added, referencing Clemente's death in a plane crash on New Year's Eve 1972 while flying from Puerto Rico to help deliver supplies to earthquake victims in Nicaragua.

One final thought from Mandell perhaps best sums up Clemente collectors: "It's an outstanding community of people who feel the magic of an icon — a larger-than-life shooting star which shone so brightly and then disappeared leaving us all wishing for more."

From Father to Son

A father passed his love for baseball cards onto his son, and it paid big dividends with a valuable collection.

BY GREG BATES

Eddie Healy has plenty of stories to tell about the bond over baseball that he shared with his dad, Edward III.

The pair had memorable moments attending Baltimore Orioles playoff games in 1996 and '97. The hometown Orioles were always a hit with the Healys.

"I did the eulogy at the funeral and I referenced that in there, that that was a pinnacle father-son moment at a young age where you're just hooked from there on out," Eddie said.

The senior Healy unexpectedly passed away at 55 years old in May 2014. What he left his son wasn't surprising. Instead, it has become a gift that is paying dividends for his family.

Dad was a baseball card collector, who cherished the cardboard he picked up when he was young. Healy's dad had about a half set of 1969 Topps, along with various cards from the 1967 and 1968 Topps sets. He had some cards from the early 1970s as well. But what really stood out were 24 unopened 1974 Topps rack packs.

Eddie Healy III with his son, Eddie, and his daughter at the 1993 Home Run Derby in Baltimore.

"He didn't open them as a 16-year-old kid," Healy said. "I don't really understand that one."

With four other siblings, all girls, Healy took possession of his dad's cards after his passing.

"I was really the only one that took a liking to cards," Healy said. "My dad, I think, tried to get my older sister and I into collecting. Obviously, it only stuck with me. I think a little less so with the younger kids."

The Healys moved in 2016, and Eddie made sure he held onto his dad's collection. It was important to him, and he knew how important the cards were to his dad.

"He really passed the love onto me," Healy said. "He exposed it to me as a kid, but I really kind of took off with it. Really through college, I focused on — he taught me you have to get the player's rookie card."

In 2018, Healy made a summer projects list that included the note: "Find dad's baseball cards."

When Healy was terminated from his job in July 2020 due to budget cuts amid the pandemic, he finally had a chance to pull

Subject: Reed Kasoaka, Agent, Dave & Adams Card World

To Whom It May Concern:

I rarely find an interactive experience where I can truly recommend, without reservation, the other party. I would wholeheartedly suggest utilizing Reed Kasoaka for his honesty and fairness.

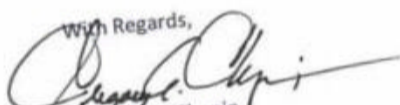

The background of my dealings with Reed Kasoaka began with a phone call. Reed was responsive in a very professional way. He desired photos of my remaining Baseball, Football, Basketball and Hockey Sports Card Memorabilia, Cases, and various Sports sets. I processed same to his attention, and almost immediately he responded with several suggested dates to come to my home in Southern California.

We agreed on Saturday, August 14th, at 9:00 a.m. Of note, he had flown in from Buffalo, New York, the day before our scheduled meeting. At precisely 8:59 a.m. Reed arrived in a rented transportation truck ready to do business. His energy was infectious as he stated that he had been in the Sports Card Industry since he was eight years old. We briefly shared a variety of stories and I then simply got out of his way.

I found him to be personable, extremely knowledgeable, and thorough in analyzing my collection. Over the course of several hours, he produced a written compilation of valuations for each of my unopened cases, as well as for my collated and uncollated sports sets, and sports memorabilia.

I decided not to sell everything as I had promised a few items to my Grandkids and Great Grandkids. From Reed's valuation lists we determined what I would let go, which was a major part of my collection. We then concluded our deal at a fair and equitable price.

With Regards,

Gregory A. Chapin

Healy's father, Edward Healy III, had a large collection of Baltimore Orioles cards.

out his dad's collection to sort it.

"A large thing was just a connection to Baltimore," Healy said. "In the '69 set, it had everything. But in the '67 stuff, it was just Oriole cards for the most part.

"He was a pretty simple guy. He was just a kid that loved sports. I think it was just something that connected kids with their favorite players, and he kind of passed that on to me."

Most of the single cards in Healy's dad's collection had been glued down onto paper, so they were basically ruined. However, when Healy came across the Topps 1974 rack packs, they were in pristine condition.

"I said to myself, 'You know, I wonder if these things are worth anything now?'" Healy said. "I don't think I'd ever looked them up on the internet. My dad had said, of all the stuff he had — he had loose cards and all these other things — he always told me, 'Don't lose these things, and don't open them.'"

Healy wasn't going to defy his dad's wishes.

Healy, who hadn't collected himself since before his dad's death, started doing some research on the rack packs on eBay and other sites.

"I kept Googling and I saw Robert Edwards Auctions (REA) sold 19 of them for 20 grand in 2019," Healy said. "Then it's like, 'OK, I have to find out if I actually have something here.'"

To get some opinions on the rack packs, Healy stopped at a couple of local card shops. One owner told Healy that 1974 wasn't a great year for baseball cards and rack packs aren't worth much. Another shop owner said he might have some money there if he got the packs authenticated.

Healy, who is in his early 30s, sent an email and pictures to REA. The auction house was extremely excited to check out the rack packs.

"Any time we're able to introduce new, exciting material to the hobby, it's a thrill for us," REA President Brian Dwyer said. "A collection of rack packs from 1974, which is a year that we see less of than some of the post-1975 Topps issues, does not come around often. The way in which these were preserved, and the fact that they had never before been sold publicly, made this a great collection."

With the card market being scorching hot late last year, Dwyer knew the rack packs would be attractive to bidders.

"Unopened material is one of the hottest segments of the market right now," Dwyer said. "With the advent of formalized pack breaking that some companies have started offering to customers lately, some of this vintage material is being opened, which really drives the price up and contributes to the scarcity of the product.

"1974 has a desirable Hall of Fame rookie, Dave Winfield, which drives interest, along with a large number of very popular stars and Hall of Famers. We see fewer 1974 packs than many other years of the 1970s, so there's good demand for them."

Healy decided to put 23 of the rack packs up for auction during REA's 2020 Fall Auction. He wanted to hold onto one of the packs as a keepsake.

"There was only one with an Orioles card showing," said Healy, who held onto a pack with Orioles pitcher Mike Cuellar. "I wanted to save one just in case 20 or 30 years they went up more in value. But, two, just kind of for the memory of the rack packs and, I guess, now this experience."

REA broke up the rack packs into seven lots. There were three packs with more value, and they each were their own lot. One had a Mike Schmidt on the top, which sold for $3,000; another had a Winfield on the bottom, which sold for $1,860; and a pack featured a Reggie Jackson on the bottom, which went for $1,260.

The other 20 rack packs were sold in four lots of five packs.

"We put an anchor card in each one," Healy said. "There's a Tony Perez, a Ron Santo and a Gaylord Perry. I put each one in their own lot with four packs."

In total, the 23 rack packs amassed $25,800 — that's after the buyer's premium — which was right in line with what Dwyer expected. Healy was ecstatic with the final figure.

Healy, who resides in Parkville, Md., was on the verge of earning his law degree in May through the University of Maryland. The money brought in from the rack packs will help pay off student loans as well as benefit his entire family.

What does Healy believe his dad would think about getting more than $20,000 for the packs and helping aid his son going through law school?

"It's funny, we all kind of joked when we were going through this, 'There's no way dad would have sold these things,'" Healy said. "He liked holding onto them and he probably would have said they'd be more valuable in the future.

"I think he also really wouldn't have believed that they could go for such a price. He didn't hold onto collectibles thinking they would pay off, or something like that. He wasn't someone that thought they were going to be an alternative asset class. They were just things he liked to have in his collection. I think he'd be extremely happy that they actually went for something like that."

YANKEE GREAT DAVID CONE MAY OWN VALUABLE COLLECTION WITH PERFECT GAME BALLS

BY PAUL POST

David Cone might have one of the most valuable, untapped baseball collections in America.

During his perfect game, hurled against the Montreal Expos on Yogi Berra Day (July 18, 1999) at Yankee Stadium, every baseball tossed out of the contest was kept in a bag for future use in practice.

Of course, no one knew Cone was in the process of making major league history.

“At the end of the game, Joe Torre secured that bag and gave them to me,” Cone said. “So, there’s about two dozen game-used baseballs from the perfect game that I have.”

Cone earned five World Series rings, the 1994 American League Cy Young Award and was a five-time All-Star while compiling a sparkling 194-126 record during his 17-year career from 1986-2003. Collectibles and memories from these achievements are extremely important, but the perfect game — one of only three in Yankee history and 16 in major league history — tops the list. And if Cone ever decides to sign and sell the game-used balls they’d certainly fetch a high price.

Cone recently welcomed hundreds of guests and fellow sports stars to his Celebrity Golf Classic, held annually at Brooklake Country Club in Florham Park, N.J. to benefit the Ed Lucas Foundation for the blind and disabled. Lucas, 82, is a legendary blind baseball journalist who’s been covering the Yankees since the mid-1950s, only a few years after losing his sight in a freak baseball accident that resulted in detached retinas in both of his eyes.

During the golf tournament and a dinner-auction that followed, Cone graciously obliged fans seeking his autograph. “I think you’re in trouble if people stop asking you about autographs, so it’s a good thing,” he said.

As a youngster growing up in Kansas City, Cone was an avid autograph seeker whose interests spanned the worlds of sports and entertainment. Those whose signature he obtained included Royals 1969 AL Rookie of the Year Lou Piniella, Chiefs quarterback and NFL Hall of Famer Len Dawson, Missouri native and professional wrestler “Handsome” Harley Race, and music icon Carlos Santana.

During the benefit auction, the highest-priced item, which fetched $7,700, was a photo of the six battery mates, signed by each player, who accounted for the Yankees’ three perfect games. The photo was taken in 2008 on the final day at old Yankee Stadium and features Cone and fellow pitchers David Wells and Don Larsen and their respective catchers — Joe Girardi, Jorge Posada and Hall of Famer Yogi Berra. Larsen, of course, hurled the only perfect game in World Series history on Oct. 8, 1956 against the Dodgers.

Other high-priced items included an autographed watercolor of Cone pitching ($3,500); an Eli Manning autographed jersey ($2,900); a framed image of Larsen’s perfect game, signed by his Yankee teammates and an accompanying World Series ring ($2,600); a lithograph of newest Yankee Hall of Famer Derek Jeter by famed sports artist James Fiorentino ($1,700); an autographed painting of Willie Mays, Mickey Mantle and Duke Snider ($1,200); and a jersey autographed by Mets Cy Young Award winner Jacob de Grom ($1,000).

Cone’s celebrity sports guests included former Mets and Yankee teammates Darryl Strawberry, Rick Cerone, Jim Leyritz and Ramiro Mendoza, and Willie Randolph and Mickey Rivers of the 1977 and ’78 World Champion Yankees.
