

She said something about leaving town.

He lied about his age.

It's about Akbar, doctor. He's been sick again.

What's he on about?

I want to know all about it.

I'm really worried about you.

Is she happy about being pregnant?

We spent the whole afternoon walking about town.

Books were scattered about the room.

There's something really strange about Gudarz.

What I like about the car is that it's so comfortable.

How about a salad for lunch?

I'm feeling hungry. How about you?

Please do something about it.

Can you do something about that noise?

Why don't you do something about your room?

It's all about money these days.

It's all about having fun in the sun.

What was all that about?

What's that book about?

We were talking about Akbar.

I really don't know what all the fuss is about.

What didn't you like about the play?

There's something about her life that worries me.

She's always talking about you.

There's something I wanted to ask you about.

What did you like best about the book?

It's about a three-hour drive.

There's something wrong about that.

We left the bank at about 10:30.

I live about 10 miles away.

Is your mother about? I want to talk to her.

I was about ready to leave when somebody rang the doorbell.

We're about ready to leave.

It should cost about $1500.

Tim's about 25 years old.

The church is about a mile away.

He left the house round about four o'clock.

We don't always agree about everything.

I don't want to argue about this anymore.

Why do people always complain about that?

I dream about being with you forever.

Sometimes I wonder about his behavior.

We don't need to worry about him.

I don't need advice about my life.

They reached an agreement about the plan.

My main concern about moving to Tehran is the cost of housing.

She could not make a decision about the dresses.

Do you think she was embarrassed about it?

She is not fussy about her food.

He is optimistic about the future.

She's still upset about her uncle's death.

She seemed very pleased about something.
